The streets of London are relentless during rush hour. Even more so for a voiceover artist running late for the biggest audition of her career. As Pilar walks the narrow path of Euston Road, she realises she hasn t read the brief. But then again, how important is the brief? Being a Spanish voiceover artist in a competitive city is hard when challenges are plenty and opportunities few. Read stories of success and setback as a freelancer in this telling account of everyday life. From the Edinburgh Fringe Festival to a major audition for a popular cartoon series. Walk with her. Find out why Pilar s voiceover career revealed more about herself than anything else and how these insights helped her to discover a new passion for podcasting. This is an honest and funny account, which explores the permanence of memory, personal relationships, and the value of self-discovery in pursuit of a dream job.
